

THE MINNESOTA INDIAN WAR.
The latest advices from the region of the late Indian massacres in Minnesota, are to last Saturday morning. The Indians had abandoned the scene of their late bloody operations, and fallen back westward and are now at or beyond Lower Medicine.—
The St. Paul Press says :
Not an Indian is to be seen in all the district recently laid waste, and it is now, and will continue to be, just as safe to reside there as it was before the outbreak.
Col. Sibley was to advance as far as the Lower Agency on Sunday, where he would build a bridge, and bury the dead. A scouting party followed Dr. Humphrey's body, and in the cellar of a burned house, the bones of his wife and children. The only surviving son is now in St. Paul.
On Sunday morning a German woman with five children came to Fort Ridgely, who had been out eight days with nothing to eat except what they obtained from the gardens and fields.
The cavalry had for the most part left the Fort and returned home, having enlisted for the emergency, and finding no prospect of a battle.
Mr. Nourse met the Seventh regiment forty miles this side of the Fort, expecting to reach it Sunday. He met Colonel Marshall at Belle Plaine.
The fighting of mounted men is needed in the field immediately. The infantry cannot overtake them; and it is not thought that the Indians will revisit the scenes of the late tragedy.
What Vattle says of Traitors.
A traitor has been considered in all ages the most infamous of men. His crime is esteemed in baseness, and the exhibition of detestable nature, more heinous than murder. Here is what a great authority on the laws of nations says of him: "If every man is obliged to entertain a severe love for his country, and to procure it all the happiness in his power, it is a shameful and detestable crime to injure that very country. He who becomes guilty of it violates his most sacred engagements, and sinks into base ingratitude; he dishonors himself by the blackest perfidy, since he abuses the confidence of his fellow citizens, and treats as enemies those who had a right to expect his assistance and service.— We see traitors to their country only among those men who are solely sensible of a base interest, who have an immediate value for none but themselves, and incapable of every sentiment of affection for others. They are therefore justly detested by the whole world as the most infamous of all villains."
Hunter and Mitchell.
A Washington special of the 2d to the Gazette says:
It is understood that Gen. Hunter was recalled from South Carolina at his own request. He is very much dissatisfied at the result of his attempts to arm and organize the negroes, and it is also said that his services were thought to be needed here in some such capacity as that he occupied last year before Bull Run. Gen. Mitchell is expected to make things as active in that department as his force will admit. He has already sailed to relieve Hunter and take command.
The Doctor's Capital.
There is no doubt but that intended capture of Washington has given spirit to the recent dash and audacity of the rebel leaders. They felt so certain of success under the flag of Jackson that a late Richmond Whig closed a war article as follows:
"The city of Washington itself must be annihilated. There can be no peace until the nest of Yankees and traitors is exterminated. It is a bar to any satisfactory intervention by foreign powers; and would forever constitute a bone of contention in the event of a temporary adjustment. The fate of Carthage must be that of Washington. Let 'Stonewall' have one lick at it and we shall have no more trouble from that quarter."
There is a rebellion among the English Quakers. The youthful fair of the sect have banded together in opposition to the poke bonnet and scant skirt. Crinoline of moderate periphery now surrounds their frames, and flowers and ribbons are invading the precincts of the drab. The elders are moved to lamentations, and, through their organ, The British Friend, urge plaintive remonstrances. The young men among them are also exciting consternation by joining rifle corps.
A PATRIOTIC GIRL.—The Muncie (Ind.) Press says :
"At a meeting in this county, held for the purpose of getting volunteers, a young lady went to her betrothed, took him by the hand, and led him up to the stand where the recruiting-officers were taking the names of those who desired to enlist in the service of their country, and then, without seeming in the least abashed in the presence of the large assemblage, kissed him, and laid his hand on the roll for him to sign his name."
GENERAL BUTLER AND THE NEW ORLEANSISTS.—General Butler was writing in his business parlor one day, when a noise outside disturbed him. He went to the gallery, and leaning over to catch the face of the orderly on duty, asked "Who's that?" A woman, superficially a lady, at the instant passing, answered tartly: "One of our New Orleans sh-sadders. The Gen. ejected."
GOV. SEWARD, in his late official dispatch to Mr. Adams at London, states for the information of the British and affiliated Governments that
"EVERYWHERE THE AMERICAN GENERAL RECEIVES HIS MOST USEFUL AND RELIABLE INFORMATION FROM THE NEGRO, who rails in coming as the harbinger of war"
We trust those who pretend to admire and sustain Gov. Seward's official course will no longer deny or ignore this indubitable truth. The assertion of the Albany Argus that the slaves bringing our commanders information "have generally turned out to be impostors," is a monstrous defiance of notorious facts.—N. Y. Tribune.
A Petticoated Steadfastier.
E. E. Talbot, of Tallmadgeville, Wayne co., Pa., is recently arrested at Niagara Falls while attempting to escape to Canada, in women's clothes. His wife accompanied him, he going under the name of Miss Mary Perkins. The contemptible fact was reported by Tallmadgeville under Benjamin's administration.
John P. Hale on the War.
The following speech, delivered at a meeting by Senator Hale, in Boston: "I don't know what to think of the war. I don't know when it will end. But I will say, and perhaps you will say, too, that it has done good." The Mayor, "I will protect you," "That union has equalled the energy of the rebels, except the weakness with which we have opposed it." "When shall a vigorous policy begin?"
